

A humming breeze, swaying trees, and sunlight of a warm degree encompass archipelago Casus. Tranquility at last.

ORB: BOOM!

SAMUEL: Crabs! What in blue whales makes an explosion this early?

SAMUEL: THUD, THUD... THUD!

SAMUEL: It's real.

Noticing the purple smoke, Samuel, an apprentice sailor, wakes up from his foggy slumber to the scent of Dula shards. It was a sailors' myth that very few have seen and many have died searching for to prove. Samuel was no less boisterous in spirit.

DULA SHARD: PLOP!

As a Dula shard fell right ahead of Samuel's boat, he saw his chance to glory.

SAMUEL: Dynamite!

Samuel swam like the shard was a fish to end his hunger. He pushed through the thick current, heaved all marine life in his way, and savoured his breath like a shark munches its prey.

SAMUEL: GRAB!

DULA SHARD: WOOOSH!

The shard began glowing and transported Samuel's thought to a temple... a temple with a figure whose dark yet colorful appearance set an unnerving tone.

SORCERESS: So you are the chosen one? Run, find all the pieces of the orb if you want but remember... all of it will be mine. Mine!

DULA SHARD: WOOOSH!

Samuel finds himself wet as a fish.

SAMUEL: If that witch thinks she can win, she better think of losing as well.

With a mission and purpose, Samuel dries himself, gets dressed, and sets sail for Casus.